

work: meeting the demands of change which are legitimate and rejecting those that are not.

Media Role Is Limited

What we can do is pretty much what we have been doing, improving wherever and whenever we can. But in the interests of honesty and candor, I must state my own personal view that we have a limited role insofar as we are speaking of meeting the challenges the young have raised about the way higher education is carried out in the United States. This may not be comforting, but I hope at least it is honest. Understanding we can help with—though I am not sure that many people are going to be pleased with that which we may be able to make them understand. But as for support—well, I end by employing an old reporter's ploy, answering a question by asking a question, and it is simply this: support for what?
